County Schools In Dire Need
Of Teachers; Farmers Warned

Principal of Training Course Appeals to Rural People to Help Out in Emergency, Regrets Girls Going to Colleges Rather Than Giving Home Folks Benefit of Education.

(BY FRANK J. LOWTH)

To the Farmers of Rock County:

In Monday evening's Gazette there appeared a list of the young people from Janesville who will attend the various higher institutions of learning this coming school year. Too large a percentage of the young women are country girls who have not used that high school training to improve the country schools of Rock county in any way.

The writer of this letter wonders why this is so. Most of the young women, who are farmers' daughters, received their common school course in the county schools of Rock county. But they and their parents are evidently unwilling to help those country schools by furnishing better teachers.

The farmers of Rock county do not realize the situation apparently. There is at present a great shortage of teachers. Supt. O. D. Antisdel has been obliged to import many teachers from other counties; and still the attendance in the county training school is small. We could take care of twice as many with the present faculty and equipment.

Girls go to colleges.

Farmers are sending their daughters to Madison, Beloit, Milwaukee, and elsewhere, or into the various factories, shops, or stores of Janesville, Beloit and other cities and still they are looking for teachers for their country schools. Why do not more fathers and mothers encourage their girls to prepare for even a short service in the country schools? The need is great. The indifference is most appalling and disheartening.

Rock county ranks fourth in wealth among the counties of Wisconsin, but in earnest, thorough-going interest in the welfare of her country schools she must rank low in the list of Wisconsin counties.

The farmers of Rock county must wake up if they expect to have good country schools. They must deliberately plan to give some service themselves by encouraging their daughters to teach for a while, at least, in the country.

150 Teachers Are Graduated.

The training school in Rock county has been in operation now for eight years, and has graduated 150 young women. Seventy-five of these graduates will teach in Rock county this year.

At no time in the history of the county training school has the faculty been able to give anywhere nearly its full service, and in large measure, because of the indifference of the farmer class. Some unthinking people have felt that Prin. F. J. Lowth was pushing the training school for his own sake or for his own personal interests. Such an idea is worse than foolish; it is pernicious, it is damaging. Mr. Lowth has only the largest purpose, first, last, and all the time, and that is to help the country schools and the country boys and girls of Rock county. Both the training schools are merely means to an end. The great end is educational progress and uplift, of course.

Educational Dynamite Needed

A big charge of educational dynamite is needed in Rock county. There is altogether too large a number of the spiritually dead. Unless we get an awakening in the country schools will suffer increasingly, and they are suffering at the present moment very much, indeed.

Rock county has plenty of money; Rock county has the best high school facilities; Rock county has hundreds of capable young women. But Rock county now lacks enough country teachers of any sort, and she stands in great need of better teachers all the time.

And in the face of those facts the attendance in the county training school can handle twice as many. Where are the people who ought to be getting ready to serve Rock county? They are in the cities and towns, or they are in the service, or they are getting ready for some future service which will in nowise benefit the country schools of Rock county.

Farmers Kill Schools.

Many Rock county farmers are committing educational suicide. They will do but little to get them. And, above all things, they usually do not personally endeavor to provide for the country schools. They are weak in their own families.

The situation is serious, but many farmers are asleep. They must wake up for the sake of their own children.

Rock county can take care of its own country schools, but it is not now doing it and simply because of indifference and lack of interest.

This communication is long enough. If it does not get more teaching material into the training school then it is all in vain.

Mr. Farmer and Mrs. Farmer—Where is your daughter today? Has she a high school education? What is she going to do with it? Is she going to help your district school? If not, why not?

Lowth Year End of Rope

The principal of the county training school is about at the end of his rope. The lethargy and indifference of many of the Rock county farmers is something he cannot understand; his hands are tied. He is ready to serve the country schools to the limit of his ability, but his service is too often ignored or spurned. Why? Educators why?

It goes without saying that this letter is not addressed to those loyal men and women of Rock county who can see the point and who are willing to do the right thing. The principal of the county school appreciates to the utmost the fine spirit and cordial response of those who are spiritually awake and who have always valued education and the best interests of county boys and girls.

This communication is for the benefit of those who need it, and they are a good many such in old Rock county.

Good Women Needed

This county needs an educational awakening in the interests of rural

Voice of the People

To the Editor: If there is a city official devoid of all moral sense, as Monday's Voice of the People indicates, why not have a grievance committee to try it out and in place of the carpenter, who, by the way, is a replica of Adonis, get in a less conceited man. Before Monday's "Voice," many of us had heard the story, also other stories about this same man.

Another Timely Subject

Owing to the influx of Samson workers our schools are over-crowded. My son was sent home to make room in school for a refter's son. My boy is 5 years and 10 months old. We own our home. Why can't the Samson start a welfare station and have a kindergarten in it for their employees' children? Make this station a community house and care for their people.

In Envoel

Could we enforce some old Connecticut Blue Law to punish women who come and sit in our houses every day and watch us do our work? Or worse yet, hinder us? I have a neighbor who wastes two hours a day on me and I never once was in her house.

Mrs. Joseph Darcy.

JANESVILLE EXHIBITS
SEEN AT ELKHORN FAIR

[By Gazette Correspondent.]

Elkhorn, Sept. 17.—The largest Tuesday crowd that has ever at the Walworth county fair was seen there this year. Wednesday's crowd was a record breaker.

There are 376 head of hogs on exhibit and about 275 head of cattle. The chief breeds shown are milking Shorthorns and Holsteins. Among the exhibitors are the Little herd of Shorthorns of Evansville and K. C. Crall, Evansville, with 10 head of Red Polls. Practically every leading breed of cattle is represented.

Douglas & son, Janesville, have 10 head of Jerseys. A feature of the cattle exhibit is 21 head of Brown Swiss, which are being shown by W. O. Bohart, Bozeman, Mont.

The exhibit of draft horses is small. Probably the greatest interest in this department centers on seven head of Suffolk horses being shown by C. W. Thompson, Walworth, who is also showing 13 head of Hereford cattle.

The floral hall is filled with fancy work, poultry stores, fruits, vegetables, grains, seeds, seed corn, etc. Advertisers have reserved all the available space and some excellent exhibits are being made. J. M. Bostwick & Sons, Janesville, have one of the largest booths in the hall. Other exhibitors are W. W. Bradley & Co. and John Kenney & Co., both of Delavan, and the Elkhorn Dry Goods company of Elkhorn, also the Jaeger-McKenzie Piano company of Janesville.

STILL WORK TO DO.

The General Motors corporation will take over the Janesville Housing corporation's stock and contracts. Work of building homes for employees of the Samson Tractor company will be started on a much larger scale than the local organization was able to undertake. The stockholders in the Janesville corporation are satisfied as are the tractor officials. The purchase will more quickly solve the great problem facing Janesville—that of providing homes for workmen at the tractor plant as quickly as the company can use them.

The local corporation could not hope, with its capital limited to $300,000, to build the number of homes demanded by those who will come to the city. It will take more than hundreds of thousands of dollars to carry out the plan on a scale large enough to meet demands. The motors people have the capital to expend millions if necessary. It is evident that they will do so. Fear has been expressed that if the General Motors took over the Janesville Housing corporation a city would be built separate from Janesville. Mr. Durant, president of the General Motors, has repeatedly declared that he was interested in the proper development of Janesville and that he and his associates would lend every aid possible to bring about an orderly and lasting growth. The housing corporation has lots in all sections of the city and assurance is given that these pieces of property will be utilized in the building program to be announced later. There is no doubt but that the southern part of the city will be built up in the next five years, but that does not mean that the remainder of the city will have to be abandoned. Instead it would appear that those who are interested in caring for the natural business which will come to us through the addition to the population will have to extend themselves to keep pace with the development which will rapidly take place now that the motors corporation is all set to step forward.

That leads us up to the matter of furnishing homes for people who are coming here every day and who will not be connected with the Samson Tractor company. Almost every business in the city has expanded in the last year. Additional help has been employed in nearly every store, factory and business place. This has necessitated the bringing in of men and women. Homes must be furnished for them. The business men will have to be the ones to aid in providing these homes. If they expect to tie their employees to them they will have to furnish them places to live. Now that the housing corporation has been absorbed other manufacturers and business men should immediately organize and get into operation some concern which will build homes either to sell or to rent to those not employed by the tractor company.

The need for such a move might be well illustrated by a situation which arose in a business place recently. A young man with a small family who had practically lived in Janesville all his life and learned his trade here was compelled to move because the house he rented had been sold. He could not find another house to rent and he was compelled to buy. His capital was limited. His employer aided him in getting a place through a building and loan association in another city. Many such cases could be cited. But why go to another city to get aid? There is enough local capital here to swing such propositions if it is organized.

WHEN PERRY WENT TO JAPAN.

Recent discussions of the Shantung amendment to the peace treaty, and various phases of America's relations to Japan, have revived interest in the historic introduction of the western world to Japan, which was effected by the visit of Commodore Perry in the early fifties.

The National Geographic society, from its Washington headquarters, has issued a bulletin concerning that memorable expedition and the man who headed it, extracted from an address of Secretary of the Navy, Josephus Daniels made before the society, March 23, 1918. Upon that occasion Secretary Daniels said:

"The early services of Matthew Calbraith Perry foreshadowed his illustrious career. He was entrusted with the delicate mission to Japan because he had shown constructive statesmanship as a naval officer. He was privileged to choose the location for the first free black settlement in Liberia. He is called 'The Father of the Steam Navy.' He revived the use of the ram in the naval warfare. He founded the naval apprentice system. He was active in suppressing the slave trade on the Guinea coast. He adjusted the Canadian fisheries dispute in 1852.

"He helped greatly in removing duelling, flogging, and flogging from the navy. In 1847 he commanded the largest squadron which up to that time had ever been assembled under the stars and stripes. It was the first American fleet governed without the lash, flogging having been abolished by Secretary Graham. It was that fleet which decided the day at Vera Cruz and started General Scott on his victorious way to the City of Mexico.

"The triumph of Perry upon which his fame chiefly rests was the opening of Japan to the world, one of the most important events in our history. The story of Perry's voyage to Japan has all the glamour of the stories of the Orient, and is fascinating beyond the imagination of the most fertile novelist. Armed with a letter from the President of the United States to his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Japan, saluted as a 'Great and Good Friend,' Commodore Perry made a thorough study of Japan and the Japanese character before starting on his epoch-making voyage.

"He carried as presents specimens of the products of the farm and factory, which he thought by their novelty and usefulness would interest the people of Japan. A miniature locomotive, with tracks and rails to be laid down, one mile of telegraph line with Morse instruments, photo-camera, printing presses, puzzles, and toys, some of the newest things in America, were in the cargo.

"The story of his wisdom, his patience, his consummate diplomacy, going into weeks and months and years, the employment of every art that statesmanship and strategy could invent, is as thrilling today as when it was first told. He had gone to Japan with a friendly key to open the door for the furtherance of trade, the protection of life, and to obtain a treaty with a power destined to occupy a large place in the world. Hurrying nothing, observing every ceremony that could appeal to those he would win as friends, Perry's success marked him as a diplomat of the first water.

"When the negotiations had reached a stage where the high contracting parties had agreed, Hayashi

And the trees aglow with jewels which some dead old king has lost,
And I like the distant hill tops looming far away from

In their garb of gold and purple and that glorious autumn brown.

I like the mist that rises with the coming of the sun
To betray some bit of beauty that has just been newly done;
Oh, there's nothing that's too lowly on the breast of Mother Earth
To receive a touch of color as a symbol of its worth.

I like October's manner for its generous with all,
Every leaf is splashed with splendor ere the day that it

And it passes from its labor to its everlasting rest
Not as one that's worn and weary, but as one that's

Oh, it never comes October but the thought returns to

That I'd like to end my toiling as a leaf upon the tree—
I should like to flutter eastward, touched with scarlet wished to insert a clause that no American woman should be brought to Japan. Tradition has it that when this proposition was submitted the Commodore excitedly exclaimed, 'Great heavens! If I were to permit any such stipulation as that in the treaty, when I got home the women would pull all the hair out of my head.' And that was half a century and more before those wonderful evangelists, Anna Howard Shaw and Carrie Chapman Catt, taught us to believe in woman suffrage as a new creed in geographical and political expansion! 'Overlooking the harbor of Nippon stands a monument to Commodore Perry, commemorating the sailor-diplomat whose wisdom made Japan and America know and esteem each other. The friendship between these two nations has been cemented in the present-day partnership in the war for the triumph of free nations, in which they are allies. The spirit of Perry and Hayashi still pervades both countries, which, in the language of the latter hero by Perry, 'Live in friendship and commercial intercourse with each other.'

Mr. Wilson says his tour shows the people are with him. The question naturally arises, "Where is he?"

Brain workers declare that they will organize a union. Stenographers, draughtsmen, clerks, salesmen, accountants and professional men are mentioned as among those who favor the plan. They point out that those who work with their hands have had their wages boosted several times, while they are getting about the same wages they did before prices soared to the limit.

The people of the west are noted for their hospitality. It has been their habit for years to welcome the stranger with open arms. President Wilson has not often been in the west and he can be likened to a stranger. That is perhaps the reason for his optimism in regard to the fine receptions the people on the coast have given him.

Survivors of J. Barleycorn

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN, Director

Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau,
Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 18.—It now appears that when J. Barleycorn is officially pronounced dead by the national coroner next January, he will leave two poor, weak country cousins to mourn him and to comfort his friends, insofar as they are able.

These survivors of the lusty old trouble maker are officially known as non-intoxicating elder and wine. These two sweet and innocent beverages have been rumored to other and more powerful descendants of the Jim-Jam king who really are about in hiding after that date, and that the internal revenue office will play an exciting game of hide-and-seek with them throughout the rest of the republic's troubled history. But they will be illegitimate outlaws with prices on their heads.

Not so with non-intoxicating elder and wine. These two sweet and innocent beverages have been rumored to other and more powerful descendants of the Jim-Jam king who really are about in hiding after that date, and that the internal revenue office will play an exciting game of hide-and-seek with them throughout the rest of the republic's troubled history. But they will be illegitimate outlaws with prices on their heads.

These two little strangers have seldom been seen outside of their native country people for a couple of hundred years. "Not only elder, but wine of grapes, cherries, and a variety of other small fruits have long been made in the rural districts according to recipes of great age, some of which came down from the time of the Romans. The summer is almost impossible to buy any small fruits in Maryland and Virginia, because their juices were so highly valued. And now it is suspected that some of these juices are moving cityward.

Safe to Pass on Recipe.
If you have a good recipe for making wines and elder you are perfectly safe in passing it along to a friend, but you must not supply him with a recipe for liquor. One section of the dry enforcement act provides that "no person shall assist or encourage any person in the manufacture, sale or distribution of liquor, or give information of how liquor may be obtained in violation of this act."

This is considered a dragnet to get every person who in any way gives information as to the location of liquor for sale or the methods of making liquor illegally. Under this provision, lawyers held, it would be illegal to give a friend or neighbor a recipe for making anything taboored under the prohibition laws. Civil damage suits can be brought by a person "injured by intoxicated persons" against any such person contributing to such intoxication by selling liquor or assisting in procuring it.

When the dry enforcement bill was passed by the house an unsuccessful attempt was made to permit the purchase of elder and wine in homes. The dries defeated the attempt, but since the senate decided in favor of these mild beverages it is understood that representatives of the dry force will not oppose these concessions to the wets in conference, where the bill is now being considered.

The bill settles a moot question by specifically stipulating that the enforcement of prohibition is up to the "commissioner of internal revenue, his assistants, agents and inspectors, and all other officers of the United States whose duty it is to enforce criminal laws."

Enforcement Is Big Job.
To enforce prohibition is a big job, and the commissioner of internal revenue knows it. He is now busily engaged making plans for his work

A CIVILIAN FLYING FIELD.
One of the most interesting facts which has been brought out by the experience of the municipal flying field at Atlantic City, is that men are much more anxious to fly than women. At this field anyone can buy a ride in the air for $25, and about eight out of every ten customers are women.

Recently an elderly woman took a flight, made the pilot do every stunt he knew, including a barrel-roll flight upside down. When she landed she announced that before the day was over she meant for every one of her nine children to have a similar ride. And they did.

Although there have been no serious accidents in connection with the flying field, for the benefit of the cautious an insurance company offers a special accident policy for 24 hours. A woman can get a $5.00 policy for $4, and the same policy costs a man $6.

The flying field was organized by the Aero club of America, but the pilots are army officers who own their own machines. Most of the machines have been service abroad, and were purchased from the government by the aviators when they left the service.

The flying field sells about 20 to 40 rides every day and always draws a crowd of spectators. The champion is kept out in a leather coat and goggles, and may then have a picture taken of himself, seated in the machine or standing by it, looking as professional and sophisticated as possible.

WHOS WHO in the Day's News

CARDINAL MERCIER.
Cardinal Mercier of Belgium, now visiting in the U. S., was born at Braine l'Alleud in the very cradle of the Belgian revolution. He was educated at the seminary at Malines for a few years and then was appointed to the chair of philosophy at Louvain university. He spent the greater part of his career, entirely devoted to the study and teaching of philosophy. He soon made Louvain his school of modern scholastic philosophy. His numerous works have been translated into many languages and it is interesting to note that the Germans fully appreciated his works, one of his books even becoming a classic at the University of Bonn.

On Feb. 7, 1908, he was raised to the Archiepiscopal See of Malines, and was created cardinal a few months later. A titular member of the Belgian academy long before becoming an archbishop, he has since the war been a member of the Institute de France, the Royal Academies of Madrid and Turin, and many other learned societies. Several universities among which are Oxford, Cambridge, Trinity (Dublin) and Edinburgh have offered him honorary degrees, and the Academy of Moral and Political Science of Paris awarded to him the Grand Prix d'Audifret—all this in recognition of his gallant stand through the war.

EXTENSIVE REAL ESTATE PURCHASES MADE BY G. M. C.

Real estate property valued at $545,525 has been purchased by the General Motors company in Janesville during the past 14 months. The work is exclusive of the property recently acquired by the concern, including the Milwaukee farm and the building located at the corner of East Milwaukee and North Bluff streets.

Just how many acres of land within the boundaries of Janesville are owned by the General Motors is not known. They have purchased real estate in all sections of the city with their main holdings in Spring Brook. More property is being purchased by the concern every day. It was announced today that the Milwaukee farm had been acquired and last week a downtown building was purchased to be used for the engineering department. The building will be entirely remodeled and redecorated.

BOND WILL COACH AT LAKE FOREST

Howard Bond, third baseman for the Lawrence team, the greater part of this season, left for Lake Forest academy today to become assistant basketball and football coach there. Bond is considered one of the best all-around athletes in the history of the school. It is possible that he may return to the Lawrence team this year. Bond was also the mainstay of the Barb Wire team in the industrial league. He also played with the White Sox. He was a fair hitter and a consistent leader. In his 10 games with the team he handled 34 chances with only two errors for a fielding average of .941.

ARMORY BLOCK IS SAFE--CHIEF MURPHY

Chief Cornelius J. Murphy of the fire department emphatically denied today the many stories that have been circulated about the city during the past few months regarding the armory block being unsafe and that it would collapse under a large crowd.

"The building is one of the finest built buildings in the city of Janesville and there is no possibility of its chance of it collapsing due to a large crowd in the dance hall," said Chief Murphy.

Chief Murphy asserted he had made a careful investigation of the walls after the fire had been checked this morning and he found them to be the best of condition.

"They are strong and there is absolutely no truth to the rumors that the building is dangerous," said Chief Murphy.

RUSSIAN WOMEN ARE DESCRIBED TO LOANI BAND BY MARKHAM

L. A. Markham was introduced to the members of the Loani band at a meeting held last evening at the Congregational church as Janesville's missionary recently from Russia. He took a task on conditions prevailing in that country, and the outlook for the future. He said it was particularly inspiring to greet a group of Christian women in the Loani band because the condition of women was so depressing in Russia, where he had been for about a year. He drew a vast area of Russia, spread over a vast area of country, and with most of its inhabitants on at least 85 percent, belonging to the ignorant peasant class. He showed how most of them lived far from the city, and how they had no telephones, newspapers, and most other means of interchange of thought.

He considered that the people possessed a great capacity for learning, and that the 15 percent of the educated class had given to the world many noted literary men like Tolstoy, Gorky and others. He discovered that they had a natural, inherent musical talent. He mentioned one occasion when he was with a sturgeon party bringing up supplies, and one old man started on of their national songs, and the whole party joined in the song, and the melody and carried it through.

He noted Russians Hospitality. He noted that they were a hospitable people, and though they were poor, yet they were glad to offer shelter and tea to any wayfarer. He especially enjoyed the hospitality of the country, and considered them bright in mentality. He described a Christmas party which the soldiers gave where they were quartered, where the children sang folk songs, played games, and each received a gift of candy, after which refreshments of biscuits and honey were served to all. The great problems connected with the reconstruction of the country, which could co-operate in bringing about the regeneration of the government and so the life of the individual.

He gave a vivid word picture of a Russian home of the better peasant class, where the barn was adjacent to the living room, and the latter sheltered 13 persons of all ages. Besides that the family loom where the cloth was woven was in the corner, and the children of the family were in the room, and the labor. Chickens were running around the floor, and sometimes on cold nights, the family cow was in the room.

Educational Opportunities Lacking. The school also had no education, at system, he declared, hardly any for the children of the village, and sixth grade education. The whole system had a course which took in studies for three years. The higher schools of learning were situated several hundred miles away from the little villages, and so more education was almost unobtainable. Although there were no books or papers in the villages, the people seemed anxious to catch the American spirit, and were eager to learn more.

The Russian church, he felt, had failed to function with the higher life of the people, as while there were pretentious church buildings, every hand, yet their religion was a mere shell. Their desire for religious instruction was most intense. The high commission to the Russian women, in whose hands he believed lay much of the future destiny of the race. In spite of the fact that they did almost all the hard work of living, took care of the farms, wore the cloth for the clothing, did much of the hard building work like the man's work, and so forth, they never seemed to be bitter or hopeless. Upon them had fallen a burden of sorrow from the loss of over two million of their men had been killed in the conflict, but as many of them were, with little children to care for, they took up the task bravely. With their endurance and fortitude, he felt, there would be a new day dawning for the country some time, and he knew that they looked to America as their savior.

Rev. Melrose Asks Cooperation. Rev. J. A. Melrose also gave a few remarks wherein he asked for the cooperation of the women in the future work of the church. He emphasized the need of a larger social side of Christianity. "The grace of cordiality in the church was a special need combined with a spirit of thoughtfulness, of sympathetic attention and neighborliness in the parish," he pointed out.

Mrs. A. C. Hough called attention to the missionary board, and whereby extra funds could be raised to pay for a missionary in the city of Janesville, for work among the Greeks and Armenians. She used Hansen spoke briefly of the work of the missionary conference held in Geneva last summer, and also announced the formation of a class for further study along these lines.

The president of the band, Mrs. J. A. Craig, presided at the meeting. The secretary, Miss Lenore Clifford, read her annual report. A supper was served to about 30 at 6:30 o'clock, with Mrs. O. E. Oestreicher, Mrs. Susan McManus as hosts.

PERSHING RECEIVED IN CONGRESS; GIVEN FORMAL THANKS

ed you individually and to your officers and men embase the thanks of the American people and of congress of the United States for the honor in itself conferred in our entire history on only a very few of our distinguished citizens for extraordinary services to the country.

"The resolutions of thanks is in these words:
"The thanks of the American people and of the congress of the United States are due, and are hereby tendered to Gen. John J. Pershing for his highly distinguished services as commander-in-chief of the American expeditionary forces in Europe, and to the officers and men under his command for their unwavering duty and valor in the face of the enemy."
Shows Off as Missourian.

In conclusion the former speaker paid a tribute to his native state and explained why he had been selected to speak, saying:
"The chief reason why the committee of arrangements appointed me for this night of America lay not only in her numbers and her wealth, but also in the spirit of her people and their determination to support whatever they believed in. While every man who went to France courageously did his part, behind him were millions of others eager to support him. It is a loyal people who deprived themselves to sustain our armies and support our allies. Whether billeted in French, Belgian or Italian villages, or in the cities of England, our young men have left behind them a standard of frankness, of integrity, of gentleness and of helpfulness which will give the other nations of the world a firmer belief in the sincerity of our motives."

"The benefits flowing from the experience of our soldiers will be broadly felt. They have returned in the full vigor of manhood, strong and clean. In the community of effort men from all walks of life have learned to know and appreciate each other. Through their patriotism, discipline and association they have acquired a sense of the consciousness of honorable public service, they will bring into the life of our country a more intelligent devotion to the duties of citizenship."

Thanks Congress for Backing. "To you, gentlemen of the congress, we owe our existence as a nation. We owe our armies in the field. With a clear conception of the magnitude of the struggle, you adopted the draft as the surest means of utilizing our manpower. You promptly enacted wise laws to develop and apply our resources to the best effect. You appropriated the fabulous sums for our military purposes. Many of your members visited the armies in the field and cheered us by their interest and sympathy. You made possible the organization and the operation by which victory was achieved."

"Throughout the war the president reposed in me his full confidence and his unflinching support simplified my task. The officers and soldiers who were then presented to the general by former Speaker Clark.

"Grin visaged war hath smoothed her wrinkled front," he said, and peace, with healing in her wing, like a gentle spirit now is brooding over a sore and storm-racked world. God be with you, and you, General Pershing, were a master workman in this wondrous and blessed transformation—a consummation so devoutly wished by all peoples, kindreds, and tongues."

"What we say here will be little heeded but the memory of what you and your gallant men did over there will be cherished forever as part of the precious treasures of the mighty republic."

"You and your men did not fight to add to the area or wealth of our beloved country, but to uphold the principles of right and truth and justice. Our soldiers who died in the way did not die in vain but to make men free. As long as the republic endures their graves in France will be sacred shrines."

Pershing Makes Reply

Acknowledging the honors conferred by congress, General Pershing said:
"I am deeply sensible of the privilege of appearing before you as a representative of the American expeditionary forces and am filled with pride at the sentiments that have been expressed. This honor affords me profound gratitude as a recognition of the achievements of our splendid army. In receiving at your hands an expression of the approval of our people I am richly rewarded."

"A final report of the organization and the operations of our armies will be made to the secretary of war. The manner in which this great force was developed into an instrumentality for victory is well known to you. The burdens that fell to the lot of our soldiers have been heavy and the faith in the righteousness of our cause and trust in Almighty God have given us courage and inspiration."

The trials of battle demanded Spartan endurance and utmost self sacrifice. Never have men faced a more difficult task and borne greater hardships and never have troops shown a finer spirit of willingness or more resolute purpose."

"The night of America lay not only in her numbers and her wealth, but also in the spirit of her people and their determination to support whatever they believed in. While every man who went to France courageously did his part, behind him were millions of others eager to support him. It is a loyal people who deprived themselves to sustain our armies and support our allies. Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author.

Dr. Brady will answer all signed letters pertaining to health. Address names in the column, but all letters will be answered by mail if written in ink and a stamped, self-addressed envelope enclosed. Requests for diagnosis or treatment of individual cases cannot be considered. Address Dr. William Brady, in care of this paper.

BREATHING EXERCISES

One of the chief advantages gained by a sedentary individual who gets the habit of doing a few simple breathing exercises at night and morning as regularly as dressing and undressing is the training or development of the heart muscle itself. These exercises, if they are to be of real value, must be done with a view to building up the heart muscle, and not to health, aside from any thought of muscularity, must be such as to bring about, in each session, pretty active breathing. That is to say, the exercises should leave the individual breathing hard but not exhausted or entirely out of breath. Indeed it is precisely the function that the system of regular exercise has. Exercise creates the demand for more oxygen, and the increased breathing effort supplies the oxygen to the blood and tissues.

The simple act of deep breathing is in itself an exercise, and there is no physiological basis for the popular conception that deep breathing of a voluntary character is more desirable than ordinary exercises of the general muscles of the skeleton. For the purpose of the popular propaganda for deep breathing exercise you will find some self-constituted authority whose knowledge of physiology is rather sketchy. Chewing gum is exercise—it increases metabolism about 17 percent, according to a recent scientific investigation. But gum chewing is hardly a custom to be urged in the interest of better health.

The old-time doctors had considerable to say about "poor circulation." When this idea was sincere and not a mere subterfuge like "liver" and "impure blood," it meant an unequal distribution of blood in the body and that means a lot of one-fourth of the whole volume of blood can stagnate in the great splanchnic pool, that enormous vascular network in the abdomen, stands to reason that an individual with such "poor circulation" is not physically at his best. Physiology teaches that such stasis or stagnation of blood occurs. Exercise of a general character, and not breathing exercise, tend to distribute the blood evenly. Consequently, a diet which is splanchnic pool and thereby accomplish for many individuals what neither medicine nor thought can accomplish. However, the fact is simply that some individuals are exer-

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON
LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a girl 16 years old. All of the girls in our high school or most of them are a great deal younger than I am. I am not popular with them except as a classmate. I have been called a good sport but am not liked by some of them. Could you tell me why?

(2) I am large for my age, but not tall. My worst disfigurement is my unattractive legs and thick ankles. I feel ashamed to wear short dresses although I do. Can you tell me how to make them smaller? I live on a farm and have a great deal of exercise.

(3) It is impossible for me to tell you why you are not more popular since I do not know you. I would suggest that you talk the matter over with your teacher and ask her to be very frank and try to help you in this matter. Doubtless you are a sensitive person and do not want to go through a painful experience.

(4) To lie down on the floor and roll is one of the best things you can do to reduce your legs and ankles. By pointing the toe and twisting the foot in a circular fashion.

Do not worry about your limbs because as you mature they will grow more shapely and less awkward.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl 16 and in love with a boy 21 who is very bashful and does not come to see me but seems to care a great deal when in a crowd. Everybody says he is crazy over me, but I cannot invite him to see me unless he asks to come. Neither father nor mother care to have me keep company with boys. I do not care to go with anybody else. There is another young man who asked me to marry him. He is very nice and very kind, but I do not love him.

Please tell me how to get the young man I do care for to come to see me. I am PUZZLED.

It is useless to try to make the young man call upon you. Bashfulness does not excuse him, be-

CHILD SAUCE RECIPES.

CHILI SAUCE—Twenty-four large ripe tomatoes, three green peppers, six large onions, two tablespoons each of sugar, one teaspoon each of cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves, two and one-half cups vinegar.

Seal and put in crock. Chop peppers and onions and cook with tomatoes till tender. Add salt, sugar, spices and vinegar and boil slowly until thick.

CHILI SAUCE—One peck ripe tomatoes peeled and cut fine, one dozen medium onions chopped fine, one small red pepper, sixteen tablespoons sugar, four pounds cloves, two tablespoons ginger, three tablespoons cinnamon, nine cups vinegar. Cook slowly three to four hours.

Seal jars.

Chop the onions and green peppers fine or put through food chopper. Cook the onions and green peppers one-half hour, then add the tomatoes, sugar, spices and brown sugar. Cook well or until it gets quite thick. If desired real hot add one teaspoon cayenne pepper. This is very good and is not expensive.

CANNING AND PRESERVING.

Then put on to boil, add pepper-mint that grows in the yard (most everybody has some in the yard). Add a good sized bunch of the mint. Boil about five to eight minutes, then strain through sieve, then through cheesecloth until clear. Then mix the juice, a cup of sugar to a cup of juice. Put on to boil for 15 minutes. Will be ready to put into glasses.

Also to serve with lamb or most any meats, and a pretty color of green.

Corn Chowder—Twenty ears of corn, one medium sized cabbage, six onions, two red peppers, three bunches of celery, one cup light brown or granulated sugar, one tablespoon salt.

Chop the cabbage, onions, peppers and celery. Add the corn, sugar and salt. Cover with vinegar. Boil 30 minutes.

Then mix two-thirds of a box of mustard with enough water to make a smooth paste. Add two tablespoons flour, one tablespoon turmeric. Add to the above, let all boil thoroughly and put in jars and seal.

She Married an Average Man

By ZOE BECKLEY.

A week has passed since I heard the minister say, "I pronounce you man and wife," felt the warmth of Jim's big hand on my arm, heard the wheezy little organ gasp out the ding march, and my mother's tears upon my cheek and slipped away from Centerville on the 8:55.

I shall never forget the absurd move I made when Jim and I wrote, "Mr. and Mrs. James T. Salsberry." In the hotel register at Pocomo Falls, I co-m-p-l-e-t-e-l-y forgot "for the instant" that I wasn't "Miss Ann Farrow." I blushed myself into a fever when the clerk laughed and Jim laughed and the porter made believe he didn't see the grains of rice that stuck in the folds at the end of our traveling bag.

Our bag? I cannot get used to the plural possessive. Let how I love it. As we go about seeing the sights, attending theaters, taking excursions in these strange towns, I play a constant game with myself. I call it "fascination." Maybe I'm silly. But I can't help noticing my travels everywhere how indifferent married couples seem to each other. My game of "fascination" has for its basis the pretense that Jim and I aren't married—that we're just to see each other for an hour or two for the afternoon, like the pairs of lovers one encounters everywhere in the summer.

Whenever I see an obviously married couple I watch when they speak to each other or when they pass some place of interest. Whatever the wife says or does, I improve on it. I make a point of never doing the commonplace things they do. I try to think of interesting bits of talk. I do my best to keep my mind on long and long silences, although I must say this constant trailing about sightseeing, with Jim almost half the time attending to my needs matters on the side, isn't as exhilarating as it might be. Even a bride gets weary contemplating her happiness and blessings when she has to wait three hours in a jay town where there is but one decent department store while her husband writes a contract with a red-faced contractor who says "I see it" and "I done it."

However—the five days at Lake George were heavenly. There was only one tiny cloud, and probably four letters. One was from his mother, in Middleport. I waited for him to tell me about it, but he didn't.

I asked him if there was any particular news, if his sister and brother were well, etc., and I know how he worships his mother.

To my amazement Jim folded up the letter, put it in his pocket and said:

"Oh, everything's all right, dear. But mother about some business she wants advice about. I may have to leave her, I don't know, and take a run over to Middleport for a day and a night."

I felt like crying. But I played my usual game. I hid my resentment of his mother's intrusion into our honeymoon under a brave sense of humor. I said myself that good nature and courtesy would win out where everything else fails. I scorned objections and complaint.

And I made myself as pretty at dinner time as my vanity case and trousseau would permit. And they have rather ample possibilities. I have heard nothing about the trip to another and Middleport since.

But that even for a moment Jim was willing to go, bruised my heart. I understood, on two of the other three letters he got were business documents. The fourth may have been from his sister.

But why doesn't Jim tell me things?

That fourth letter was on cream paper, with a tiny pale green border. (To be continued.)

SIDE TALKS

By RUTH CAMERON

ARE EVIL MOTHERS EXCUSABLE?

Overpraise is a disservice to the thing or person praised. Everyone knows that. Everyone has had the experience of having a story or a trip or a pretty girl so highly praised before-hand that the hearer is disappointed and makes one feel defrauded and even resentful. I am sure no one will disagree with me so far.

But outraged resentment is going to give a cry of dissent when I venture a step farther. For I dare to think it is even possible for mothers to over-praise their children.

One Would Distrust the Mother Who Wasn't Proud.

For a mother to be proud of her child is a perfectly natural thing. One would distrust the mother who isn't. And to a certain extent, one only tenderly abuses the mother who has an over-exalted notion of her son's or daughter's value.

There is a little incident related about the mother of the distinguished divine, Theodore Tilton, which arouses this sort of feeling. When he was in England he wrote his mother a letter in which he described his presentation to Queen Victoria. She was tremendously excited about the great event and rushed to communicate the news to her neighbors. "I've just got a letter from England," she announced, "and what do you think has happened—the Queen has seen Theodore."

Of course, one only smiles at this particular incident, but I do think there are times when mothers arouse a less tolerant feeling by over-doing the eulogy of their children.

Perhaps the Neighbors Were Less Amused.

Especially when the overdo is frequently repeated. It amuses us to hear that the Queen had seen Theodore, but just about the neighbors who had doubtless been fed up with Theodore for years?

I know a mother who is laughed at by a whole town because she is so
